Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton

NORTON POWER GROWS IN THE NEW MAJORITY

First the Gavel, Soon the Vote!

Congresswoman Norton presides over the House in the Committee of the Whole. Norton’s memo won D.C. its first vote on the House floor, later approved by the courts. D.C. is close to the three votes needed to break the filibuster blocking the D.C. Voting Rights Act, passed by the House last year. The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, D.C. Vote and other organizations have visited key states. Among Norton’s initiatives was a full special hour she got on the House floor.

Extra!

No Vote Yet, But Norton Ranked 19th Most Influential Member in the U.S. House of Representatives

Remarkably, not only is Congresswoman Norton ranked 19th in influence; even though she has no vote on final matters, Norton is ranked 16th in legislation by Power Rankings, the organization that ranks all 440 members. The great majority of members ranked above Norton are committee chairs or ranking members. Norton chairs the Subcommittee on Economic Development, Public Buildings, and Emergency Management.

X Against an amendment that would have eliminated summer work programs for teenagers.

X Against an amendment to prevent appropriations for Davis-Bacon wages.

X Against an amendment that would have undermined green building standards.

✓ For an amendment that sought to provide funding for another economic stimulus package to extend unemployment insurance, food stamp benefits, and Medicaid payments.

✓ For an amendment providing for direct allocations of funds for neighborhood stabilization programs to qualified metropolitan cities and urban counties.

✓ For an amendment directing the executive branch to strengthen health systems globally by allowing higher educational institutions, particularly in Africa, to collaborate with historically black colleges and universities.

Norton Improves D.C. Justice System—Beginning with High-Quality Drug Abuse Treatment in Prison for D.C. Residents

Norton gets D.C. prisoners, now housed by the federal Bureau of Prisons, in the state-of-the-art 500 hour drug program for first time. More D.C. prisoners will come home clean and ready for reentry.

▲ First hearing held on elected DA for D.C.

▲ First hearings on federal parole conditions for D.C. inmates reveal obsolete and counterproductive measures and longest prison terms in the U.S. Reform in Process: Sanctions for minor violations, allowing parolees to maintain employment and family ties while being closely monitored.

▲ Norton’s bill for three additional Superior Court justices signed by President Bush.

▲ Norton bill to allow first increase in hourly rates in six years for attorneys appointed to represent indigent parties in family court and criminal cases passed the House.

▲ Norton to visit D.C. women in prison in June in preparation for unprecedented hearings upcoming.

Norton Land’s Another Page for D.C.

Norton Stands for 160,000 Women In Combat as She Opposes Iraq War

Norton with three D.C. National Guard soldiers, in uniform, and Navy Commander Carol Holland, U.S. Navy Academy graduate, who moderated Norton’s forum; (L-R) SPC Stephanie Wade; Capt. Yolanda Lee; and Capt. Gladys Lanier. These women served with men in units on combat missions, where they took and returned gunfire.
